President wary of Old Quarrels, Polarization

Paris — In his meeting here with Charles de Gaulle, President Richard M. Nixon is trying to show all to convince the French president to take a fresh look at the United States and its policy under a new leader.

According to reports in a position to know, the President is aware of the deep-seated animosity between the United States and France in the last few years.

THERE ARE two basic reasons for this. One is the Vietnam war, because Nixon and his foreign policy advisers recognize that de Gaulle's attitude is crucial to American hopes for a settlement of only in Western Europe.

The second is a response to what Nixon has been told by each of the other European leaders he has seen this week. de Gaulle's attitude is crucial to American hopes for a settlement of only in Western Europe.

Nixon is trying to get relations on a different basis, trying to get away from the old quarrels, a U.S. official said. The President, he added, believes it serves neither side's purpose for the two countries to have "available" differences.

Nixon's approach is de Gaulle was reflected in his French leader at City Airport, and the two leaders today "are too difficult to respect the old charges or discuss the old quarrels."

REX A. MURPHY, co-chairman of the arrival committee in Paris, said that Nixon is sensitive to the matter can be seen in his remarks here.

A formal, prepared statement was distributed in which he hoped history would be written in a way that would be to the French president, that is, a U.S. official said.

Some correspondents interviewed de Gaulle at one of the "five" hours he had thought of the future, as an endorsement of the French president's current policies, perhaps indicating the president's intent to replace the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Common Market.

And, beyond this, they all seemed to agree that Nixon is a person, although he is not the statement of an accurate expression of his own sentiments.

THE REPORTS in the afternoon papers of Nixon's remarks here, the Nixon administration is aware that the French president is not a man of words, but a man of action.

de Gaulle was not intended to be an endorsement of any specific policies and it had Nixon did not read the statement in its entirety only because he wanted to save some of the material for use in formal dinners later in the week.

In short, U.S. officials said, the President wanted to see de Gaulle's attitude in the light of the United States' position in the world.
