John Frazer, 103, hero policeman from New York

John W. Frazer, 103, a retired New York City police detective lieutenant, who was cited more than five times for his bravery, died Tuesday (July 16, 1974).

Mr. Frazer's activities with the New York Police Department, where he served 26 years (1899 to 1925), were marked by many accomplishments.

ONE OF NEW YORK City's first two motorcycle policemen, he was assigned to try out one of the new centrifugals in experiments conducted around 1901.

He was president and organizer of the Police Athletic League, and planned and managed New York City's first "Police Day" to raise funds for the families of policemen killed in the line of duty.

Mr. Frazer was founder and first president of the New York City Police Department Honor Legion, which is comprised of men who have received medals for bravery or service above the call of duty.

At one time he served as acting captain of detectives responsible for handling security for visiting dignitaries, such as Calvin Coolidge, when he spirited through Grand Central Station to Pennsylvania Station at the time Coolidge assumed the presidency at the sudden death of President Harding.

AFTER WORLD WAR I he was detailed by the Police Department to look after the welfare of Edward Windsor, then Prince of Wales, during his stay in New York City.

As a boy Mr. Frazer proved his executive ability by organizing New York's first boys' club. After studying criminal law at Columbia University he joined the police force, where he taught and lectured for eight years at the Police Academy. He began his official police duties as a mounted policeman and other two years shifted to the bicycle squad consisting of 100 picked riders.

In the last years of his service Mr. Frazer commanded detectives in the area of Manhattan north of 42nd Street. After retiring in 1925 from the police department he joined a further protection agency to help it organize a police force. Within two years he went into the building business, where he stayed until he retired for good in 1933.

MR. FRAZER was a member of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Pasadena, Institutional Shuffleboard Club, honorary member of Florida Sheriff's Association, 60-year member of Cavel Trowell Lodge No. 753 F. & AM, Bronx, N.Y., member of Police Square Club of New York, and Thel Regiment Veterans Association in New York. He also was a member of the International Association Retired Policemen and Firemen.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Nathan J. (Annette) Davis, St. Petersburg; two grandchildren, Paul F. Moritz, Suffield, Conn., and Mrs. Nancy Banks, St. Petersburg, and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Friday at St. Alban's Episcopal Church with burial to follow in Woodlawn Memory Gardens.

Murder

From 1-B

Kenneth L. Whittaker, special agent-in-charge of the FBI's Miami office, said the gunman met Gans at his office, ordered him to drive home to pick up his wife, and then forced them to drive to City National Bank in downtown Miami.

Mrs. Gans was held hostage in the car while her husband went inside.

WHILE IN the bank, Whittaker said, Gans told bank president Daniel Gill what was happening.

By the time Gans left the bank a police helicopter was hovering overhead.

The gunman saw police, who began following, and led them on an expressway chase that ended when he crashed through the roadblock and drove to the field.

SYDNEY GANS
. . . slain with wife.

More than 200 area lawmen — including K-9 units, two police helicopters and a slow-speed airplane — converged on the field, bordered on one side by a canal and about three-quarters of a mile away from a fashionable residential area.

AT ONE POINT officers called fire trucks to the scene and tried to set the field on fire to flush the suspect. But a rainshower had dampened the field and the fire kept dying.

Police then got more than two dozen volunteers, dressed them in camouflage suits and flak jackets, armed them with shotguns and had them sweep the field with pepper-foggers. It was during one of these sweeps that the suspect was captured.

KUBIN SAID he was surprised that "he (the suspect) was able to withstand all that gas.

"I was really surprised when I found him," Kubin said. "At first I thought it was just a bunch of rags. Then I thought it could have been a person dead from some previous incident.

"I handcuffed him immediately. Then I yelled, 'Hold everything, I've got him.' "

Gans was the owner of the Sydney Bag and Paper Co. in northwest Dade County and lived on Bay Harbor Islands, an exclusive area near Miami Beach.

Sewage plant grant gets EPA approval

By TIMOTHY M. PHELPS
St. Petersburg Times Staff Writer

A much-delayed $9.8-million grant for expansion of St. Petersburg's southeast sewage treatment plant has been approved by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Rep. C. W. Bill Young, R-St. Petersburg, announced Wednesday.

Plant capacity will be more than doubled, its treatment will be greatly improved and a system to use effluent for irrigation will be installed.

Public Works Administrator Gene Jordan said the work could start in about two months with completion possible in two years.

RESIDENTS who live near the plant on 54th Avenue S near to Eckerd College have complained for several years of the plant's stench.

Jordan said improvements will greatly reduce but not eliminate odor problems. The intake area will be covered and its fumes controlled, but the aerators that churn the sewage will not be, he said.

Effluent coming out of the new plant will meet most state standards for advanced waste treatment but not those standards for removal of nitrates and phosphates, Jordan said. He said effluent will be sold to golf courses and others for fertilizer.

A system of deep wells will be built near the plant for storage of excess effluent, Jordan said.

APPROVAL of the grant had been held up for EPA review of the expansion. Completion now is six months to a year later than originally planned.

Water

From 1-B

MEDICAL ATTENTION only recently has been focused on the gradual accumulation of such "trace metals." Physicians diagnose on what physical disorders, if any, result from gradual accumulation.

In one of the five homes a small child is being treated for copper poisoning. She had been having problems with motor coordinations and her eyesight.

Some doctors believe that higher copper levels may cause a wide variety of behavioral problems, like hyperactivity in children, but they are quick to point out that such problems are attributed to many other causes, too.

AFTER ARTICLES Monday and Tuesday in the St. Petersburg Times revealed that 38 persons were being tested, the County health and water departments were tweeged with calls from residents worried about copper poisoning.

Cameron Monday urged residents in central Pinellas County to let their water flow a little in the morning before use.

After that warning appeared in Tuesday's Times, county water officials and Assistant County Administrator Duane Zussy arranged a meeting with health department officials.

Zussy said Wednesday that until the article appeared the administrator's office was not aware that the health department had requested the problem in the county water system.

AT A PRESS CONFERENCE Tuesday, Zussy said, "We don't know exactly what the causes are. We are fairly sure there is no single cause."

Zussy and health officials emphasized that there is no immediate danger of "acute" copper poisoning.

Wednesday the county called in its water consultants, the firm of Black, Crow and Eidness, to help set up a sampling program covering the entire distribution system.

Zussy said the sampling began Wednesday and will continue for a few days. The samples will be sent to Gainesville for analysis and a final report is expected in about three weeks.

County Water Director Pickens Talley said about five men from the water department will work on the sampling.

The Pinellas County water system serves most of the unincorporated areas of the county and every municipality except St. Petersburg, Gulfport, South Pasadena, Oldsmar, Dunedin, Belleair and parts of Clearwater.
