Ford Says Tax Break Extension 'Possible'

Ford wouldn't speculate on whether Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's temporary diplomatic post could be the next vehicle toward a possible United Nations settlement or, instead, all parties could sit down at the table.

He would say only that "the longer we have no settlement, the more likely we are to have a war and all of its attendant horrors."

The President's speech to Congress on June 25, 1975, was a landmark in U.S. policy toward the Middle East. It was the first time a President had spoken so directly about the conflict.

On a subject which both Ford and Kissinger have been working on for some time, Ford said on June 25, 1975, that he had been working on it for some time.

He said that he had been working on it for some time and that he had been working on it for some time.

He said that he had been working on it for some time and that he had been working on it for some time.
